SUMMARY OF ST. LOUIS MARKETS.

Though the opening of the local grain market following an extra holiday parently very strong all of the early gains were wiped out in the closing hour and the final quotations, especially on wheat, were sharply below Friday's figures. At the our set it seemed to be taken for granted that the bull movement launched early last week would be continued. Colder weather and strong foreign markets seemed to favor this view. Scalpers and professionals came in with a rush and buying was sufficient to send the value of both active options upward in the first hour. The visible supply showed a decrease for the work of the rush of decrease for the week, but the effect of this was later offset by general denials of the damage reports, which were sent out last Friday from points in Kansas and Nebraska. Rising temperature and an extremely light export inquiry led to heavy seiling in the last

Trading Is Light and Tone of Statistical News Is Generally Bullish.

Though there was no lack of bullish indications in to-day's market, lack of support and selling for profit caused decitnes in the value of wheat options. At the opening there was good buying on the strength of continued cool weather and higher cables. Later selling was caused by denials of reports of damage received toward the close of last week. There was considerable land delicing in the last hour.

The visible supply of wheat the past week decreased 110.000 bu, against 3.500.000 bu, against 4.500.000 bu, against 3.500.000 bu, against 4.500 bu May corn followed the downward turn of wheat, but the July option had enough support to cause a slight advance at the close. Speculation was light, and there was little outside interest. The cash demand was good, and exports were heavy.

The visible supply of corn the past week decreased 1.275.00 bu, angainst a decrease of 615.00 bu, and Chicago decreased 1.275.00 bu, and Chicago decreased 1.575.00 bu, and Chicago decreased 1.575.00
